GERMAN EMPEROR NOT IMPRESSIVE IN SIVILIAN'S CLOTHES

Published Description Him by English Writer Stirs Wrath.

BERLIN, June 18.-Very seldom does the Kaiser appear in ordinary citizen's clothes outside of his narrow family circle, but chances are that the occasions on which he lays aside military uniform in the future will be furthermore restricted, for he has just read and felt considerably annoyed at the description given him in a book by a gifted young Englishwoman, entitled 'Daphne in Her Own Country."

The authoress, whose name is unknown to the general public, but quite well known to the Kaiser, spent some months at the diminutive court of a German prince and princess, and tells in these words of the unexpected arrival of the Katser at the little castle:

'We knew that the Kalser was motoring in the neighborhood, but had no idea that he intended to call, when we were startled one morning by the news that we might expect him in less than half an hour. Twenty minutes later we heard the tones of his automobile horn, the only one of its kind in the whole empire entitled to voice more than a gruff 'honk-honk,' and the car entered the palace yard.

"My eyes sought our illustrous guest and my discontinuent was indescriband my disappointment was indescrib-able. Hitherto, I had seen the Kaiser in the glittering uniform of the guard and admired him as the perfect type of a modern warrior, but today he looked anything but imposing, dressed in an ordinary gray suit, tan shoes, and Pan-ama hat. His mustache was drooping ama hat. His mustache was drooping instead of bristling fiercely upward, and it was evident that his sallow complexion needed the colors of a gay uniform to be overlooked. He was in a splendid humor, however, and when I recovered from my first shock I found him one of the greatest charmers I ever met."

The Kaiser has been possibly fully aware that he needs a uniform to set ever met."

The Kaiser has been possibly fully aware that he needs a uniform to set him off and make people who get only a short glimpse of him forget his pale and tired look, but it has annoyed him immensely to see this observation in public print, and so in the future he will be seen by profane eves only in the be seen by profane eyes only in the full glory of one of his many uniforms.

Boy Wanders Far To See Sweetheart

LONDON, June 18 .- The Enfield magistrates were interested verterday in the romance of a boy of sixteen, who was charged with wandering.

The lad comes from Peterborough, and had letters in his pocket from an Edmonton girl. It was said that the boy and girl had corresponded through the medium of a boys' journal, and the boy had saved up his single fare to London. He arrived without a penny in his pocket, but saw the girl whom he sought. Her father, however, intervened in the romantic courtship, and vened in the romantic courtship, and the boy was subsequently found at a late hour asleen in zome bushes in the garden of a nrivate house. He said he only earned $1.50 a week, but wished to see his unknown girl correspondent. He presented a wretched appearance, and was remanded so that his parents might be communicated with, although pleaded to be allowed to walk home.

SIDELIGHTS FROM BIG CONVENTION AT CHICAGO

"You must have recovered from the apprehension of the steam roller, suggested a friend of Col. Cecil Lyon, as the Texan appeared at the Roose velt headquarters today wearing the "smile that won't come off."

"We'll beat them anyhow," confided the prize raconteur of the Roosevelt forces. "We can do it with what we've got, so why worry about more. "We used to have an old Indian down in my neck of the woods, who always sat in the sun outside the railroad station rolling home-made cigar-ettes. He always had one eye closed. One day a fool tourist got off the train and asked the old Indian if he was

It's All Roosevelt.

"I can't get away from the Roosevelts," said a newspaper man at the Maybe He's Stalling. Collseum press table. "Here my folks take me away from this convention and COMMITTEE BUGABOO send me to the Olympic games at Stockholm and holy Christmas, Teddy Roosevelt Pell is to be written about in the world's tennis contests."

"We've got a tugboat in the Chicago river," put in a Chicago reporter, "that is named Teddy Roosevelt. The blankety blank thing whistles seventeen times for a bridge, when it is necessary to whistle only twice, according to the rules.

Buttons Were Gold.

Western delegates who gather in the lobby of the Congress Hotel, of an evening, are wondering about the "mysterious stranger" who every day after ing to Chicago. A number of members the Michigan avenue lights are lit, appears in the lobby in dinner clothes.

Restful Southland.

Easy chairs-a monotonous buzz of Easy chairs—a monotonous buzz of "It has just hit a steam roller and the motorman and conductor are getting off to gather up the debris." conversation-scurrying lobbyists-was so abnormal to two Florida delegates y-st-rday that both were luiled to sleep, enjoying an hour doze in the midst of the excitement.

Photographers sought permission to take a flashlight picture of the pair of weary politicians, but did not succeed.

"Paging" For Publicity.

Eddle Burk, marager of the Congress Hotel, says that many of the obscure delegates at the convention who are aspiring for publicity have them-selves paged in the lobby several times a day.

One State representative from out is Utsh gives his name to the page at least a dozen times a day," Mr. Burk said. "Then he sits in the lobby and enjoys hearing the boys shout his name."

Not a Suffragette.

Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg, wife of Roosevelt's trust buster, has arrived in Chicago and is stopping at the Blackstone.

"I'm not a suffragette. I don't care Opinions Differ.

Every member of a contesting delegation had an individual opinion of he's in a fight like this, he won't take care of himself. I've got a little apartment in the quietest corner of the Blackstone Hotel and I'm making that a haven for him. I've brought the automobile and the chauffeur, and I'm going to take my husband back and forth from the Collseum in the car. If I can't see him at any other time during the convention than durting our trips between the hotel and the convention hall, I'll at least get the opportunity then to see how he's standing the strain."

Family Divided.

Civil war? All the horrors of family divisions that come with civil wars, minus the bloodshed, may be viewed in Chicago wherever convention dele gates gather today.

If you want the facts just ask Mrs Patrick Door, of Westville, Okla, Until a few months ago her husband was the postmaster of that city. Then Colonel Roosevelt threw his hat into the ring. Mr. Door, an enthusiastic Roosevelt advocate, leaped into the ring after it first resigning the office of postmaster "Well, you can be for Colonel Roose velt if you want to, but I am going to fight for President Taft. I know that he is right in this fight," said Mrs.

Door. Apparently President Taft heard of the attitude she had assumed. At any rate, he appointed her postmistress. The result is that Mrs. Door and her husband both are at the Congress Hotel working for their opposing candidates. The husband wears a big Roosevelt badge: his wife wears an equally no-ticeable Taft badge.

But there are no political arguments etween them. It was agreed before between them. It was agreed before they left Oklahoma that if they were continue to live together it not do to discuss the political situation.

Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester, seems to be a most popular man, or at least to have a tremendously large circle of acquaintances. He may step into an elevator, but only to be grasped by the hand by some person and reminded of the circumstances of their last meet-ing; when he steps out it is to run into the arms of another who instantly recognizes him and insists on renewing an acquaintance that may be chilled by many fleeting winters. In every room, on every floor, it is the same way, but Pinchot never lets it annoy him. He also appears to have an excellent mem-ory—or maybe he merely is a good "staller."

W. K. Kavanaugh, of St. Louis, an advocate of the lakes to the gulf deep water way, reached Chicago yesterday to attend the national convention. Hardly was Mr. Kavanaugh on the ground before he was discussing his water way project. During the day he met a number of prominent men, who that asked Mr. Kavanaugh regarding the latest activities toward getting the water way built.

Gathering Debris.

A group of Republican delegates were going from the Congress hotel to the Coliseum yesterday on a surface car. The car struck an automobile and stopped suddenly. As the motorman and conductor stepped from the car one of the delegates asked what had happened. A Roosevelt delegate, seat-ed nearby, answered:

Mr. Sloan has seen the campus of the University of Chicago, been in Oak Park and Evanston, in South Chicago, in special packing plants, visited the Park and Evanston, in South Chicago, inspected packing plants, visited the public library, enjoyed the sights and climbed to the top of sky scrapers.

"These fellows who are staying around the hotels talking politics don't know what they are missing," says Mr. Sloan. "Chicago is the most wonderful city I have ever seen. I have seen them larger than this place, but never so interesting."

S. R. O. Sign Out.

Irrepressible spirits are present among the serious committeemen as much a elsewhere—if not more.

The story percolated through the walls yesterday that at one time chairs became scarce and someone manufactured an "S. R. O." sign and hung it on the outside. Then the mischlevous one went back inside, thinking he had done some-

A half hour later he thought he would see what had become of his little effort at "funning." Some wag had gone him one better. The sign now read:

"Steam Roller Operating."

Not a Kimono.

A newspaper photographer, accompanied by a reporter, interviewed and pictured Mrs. Gleason while she was attired in the most elaborate of these creations. Mrs. Gleason thought that it would be superfluous to tell so astute a person that her gown was not a kimono. That anybody could make such a mistake was inconceivable to her.

But the next morning she learned, through this youthful interviewer's narrative, that she hal been costumed in a tasty kimono.
